- Prices do not include assembly or basing.
- Prices are a guideline. Smaller / larger models and models with fewer / more details would be more or less costly according to the relevant details. Some companies simply have much more detailed models than their close counterparts e.g. games workshop usually takes longer than other brands.

This Orc force would cost £190.00 but with the welcome discount of 20% off for new customers It would be £152.00 basing uses texture (sand, stones) and detailing (grass and tufts).

Basic basing is £1.00-1.50 a model: Choose from below 8 examples or combine them.

Specific basing price will depend on work time and additional resources required. (May require material costs for new basing materials if it is out of stock or new to my work flow)

Dirt: Gravel and stones, usually brown with one or two detailing elements such as static grass or silflor tufts.

Loaded snow: The same basing paste as the snow patches is used in a heavier capacity giving the effect of a heavy winter landscape.

Loaded forestry: Basic mud basing with additional detailing elements and more unique colour.

Unpainted sand: This unpainted sand type gives a raw beach appearance. Perfect for ancients models.

City ground/ dungeon: Similar technique to basic mud basing but typically painted in a grey tone with no grass detailing. Weathering powders are used to give the effect of dust and detritus.

Sand paste: This paste style of basing can be painted in any colour but looks particularly effective on futuristic models like 40k. It works very well in a mud tone to.

Dirt with snow patches: The same as basic mud basing but with snow patches applied. An in-house mix of white paint, matt varnish, white paint, pva and bicarb of soda is used to create a puffy and durable snow paste.
